Interview (2-way)

Governor-Elect Ron DeSantis is tapping a former Treasury official to head his administration's budget office. The announcement comes as the new administration prepares to take office in January.

The Manatee County School Board has slowed its pace for the upcoming school year. The board's decision follows a series of budget cuts that have forced the district to make difficult decisions about how to allocate its limited resources.

More than 26 years after murdering a Miami-Dade police officer, a Florida felon has been sentenced to five years in prison for a parole violation. The sentence was the result of a plea deal that allowed the offender to avoid a longer term.

Samuel Little claims he's killed ninety people, including a number of women in Florida. The serial killer is currently being held in New Mexico, where he is awaiting trial.

The widow of a security guard who was killed at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland is speaking about the grief she has faced since the shooting. Jessica Bakeman, who lost her husband in the attack, is advocates for gun control and has been a vocal critic of the National Rifle Association.

The Tampa Bay Rays won't be moving the team across town to a new stadium, at least not for now. The team announced last week that it would not pursue a new venue in St. Petersburg, citing the high cost and lack of support from local officials.

Florida environmental groups are calling on Governor-Elect Ron DeSantis to reverse his stance on climate change. They are concerned that DeSantis' focus on economic growth will come at the expense of the state's natural and human resources.

The state is still waiting on FEMA reimbursements for Hurricane Irma relief efforts. Florida Governor Rick Scott has been critical of the agency's response to the storm and is pressing for faster action.

Smart phones, smart watches, now smart states? Government officials are exploring the possibility of using technology to improve state services and increase efficiency.

The Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School Public Safety Department is working to improve safety measures on campus. The department is expanding its staff and is considering the implementation of new security protocols.

Public school teachers are urging Florida drivers to slow down and watch for pedestrians. The teachers say that accidents involving pedestrians are all too common and that they are calling for more awareness and action to prevent injuries and fatalities.
